

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE 9-A

WASHINGTON TIMES

24 December 1985

Letters

Correction

Due to an editing error in the Dec. 17 review by Arnold Beichman of A World of Secrets by Walter Laqueur, injustice was done to James J. Angleton, former head of CIA counter-intelligence. The paragraph in which Mr. Angleton was mentioned had been written, and should have read, as follows:

"True, there have been successful penetrations of the CIA. True, there were successful attacks within the CIA itself against men like James J. Angleton, whose counter-intelligence expertise was rooted out of the agency by one-time CIA Director William Colby, leaving the CIA virtually defenseless against enemy penetration."